BRITAIN'S NEAR EAST STAND.

STRAITS FREEDOM VITAL.

THE SITUATION NOW IN KEMAL'S HANDS.

London, September 22.

Reuter's Agency has received an authoritative statement of the British attitude in the Near East. This declares that Britain is seeking nothing for herself. She is pursuing no short-sighted policy based on amour propre. Her supreme interest, no modification of which can be entertained, is neutralisation of the Straits with full guarantees for free navigation for all countries under the League or any other effective international organisation. All other matters are secondary and subject to peaceful accommodation between Turkey and the states more directly concerned.

REASON WILL PREVAIL.

While the Government is completing its naval, military and air measures to safeguard the neutrality of the Straits and covering positions, it in no way desires to precipitate hostilities. War will never come from the British side, but is only possible if the Kemalists forces attack the positions occupied by the Allies at the armistice and held consistently as neutral territory throughout the Greco-Turkish hostilities. The situation is therefore in Kemal's hands, but there is at present no reason for supposing that Kemal will choose to apply force of arms to questions which can be settled by conference. There is no secret about the strength of the Turkish forces and no weight is attached to exaggerated alarmist estimates of what she can put in the field.

KEMALIST CIRCLES PESSIMISTIC.

Constantinople, September 22.

Kemalist circles see a pessimistic outlook. They declare that unless they receive assurances and guarantees from the Allies that the Thrace question will be settled in their favour, it will be impossible to restrain the army's victorious march forward, and responsibility for the consequences will fall on the powers. They state that unless pledges are forthcoming within the next 48 hours a serious situation will arise.

MODERATING INFLUENCE.

London, September 22.

Official circles in London discount the statement made by Kemal circles in Constantinople cabled earlier. They hold the opinion that direct official news from responsible Turkish ministers must be awaited.

Meanwhile there is a feeling of confidence in the result of the moderating influence of the French upon the Kemalists. The Star learns that Britain is prepared to concede generous terms to the Turks and agree to drastic revision of the Treaty of Sevres.

KEMALISTS' NEW OBJECTIVE.

Constantinople, September 22.

Reliable reports of serious concentration of the Kemalists at Ismid, whither Kemal personally is proceeding, have given rise to a belief that the Kemalists will make Constantinople their objective instead of Chanak, inasmuch as larger supplies are available in the Ismid region, while the hostile population of Constantinople might cause trouble in the rear. Nevertheless, a more optimistic tone generally prevails, based on reports of the successful outcome of the Pelle-Kemal conversations. The Kemalist forces on the Chanak frontier have not committed any overtact of hostility, but their numbers are increasing.

KEY POSITION THREATENED.

Constantinople, September 22.

It is reported that the Kemalists have seized the town of Ezine on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles and are threatening Kumkale, an important key position of the Dardanelles. It is also reported that the Kemalists are bringing up the big Skoda batteries, while British aeroplanes are flying over the Nationalist lines.

New York, September 22.

A message from Constantinople states that several American organisations in the Near East, including the Standard Oil Company, are arranging to evacuate their employees if necessary. There are about 500 Americans at Constantinople. Admiral Bristol is arranging for their safety in the event of an emergency.

PARIS CONFERENCE.

Paris, September 22.

To-day's Near East conference centred its attention on the form of the invitation to be sent to the Turks, especially whether there should be territorial negotiations, and notably whether Thrace should be mentioned therein. Lord Curzon afterwards declared that the deliberations would continue to-morrow afternoon as much remained to be discussed and M. Poincare wished to consult his Cabinet before meeting again.

LEAGUE'S INTERVENTION URGED.

Geneva, September 22.

Developing the proposal for the League's mediation in Asia Minor, Dr. Nansen stressed the necessity for rapid action. He suggested that the Council get into communication with the powers, when if they spoke with their present unanimity, they would have strong moral authority. He further suggested summoning the two belligerents on a footing of absolute equality to a conference under the auspices of the League. Sir Joseph Cook thought that Dr. Nansen's resolution was too moderate and wished it worded in a more energetic form.

THE DOLLAR.

To-day's closing rate 2/0 13/16.
To-day's opening rate 2/6 13/16.

BRITAIN'S NEAR EAST STAND.

PERSIA AND CHINA SUPPORTED DR. NANSEN.

Mr. Fisher (Britain) warned against complicating the task of the Paris conference, but said Britain was anxious to secure the co-operation of the League. He declared that he was aware the Dominions wished the League to play a very active role in the Near Eastern problem.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE.

The British Government would respect this sentiment and take it into account in any subsequent negotiations. Mr. Fisher moved a resolution hoping the Council would lend any assistance which may be asked by the powers engaged in the negotiations.

Lord Robert Cecil, for South Africa, dissented, contending the League ought to be prepared to act by itself without waiting until asked.

M. Hanotaux (France) and Signor Imperiali (Italy) supported Mr. Fisher's proposal.

Finally a committee was appointed to draft a joint proposal for submission at the next meeting.

KEMALISTS WAITING.

Paris, September 23.

A message from Adana states that Nationalist circles believe the Kemalists intend to avoid measures of force until they learn the result of the Paris conference, but in the event of failure to reach a satisfactory solution at the conference military action will become inevitable.

HOLLAND'S CONSTITUTION.

The Hague, September 22.

The Second Chamber has approved the draft proposals for revision of the constitution.

GREAT BARITONE DEAD.

London, September 22.

Sir Charles Santley, the baritone singer, is dead. [Born at Liverpool in 1834, Sir Charles Santley was educated in England and Italy. His first great success was in the opera Dinorah, at Covent Garden in 1859. He visited America in 1871, Australia in 1889, and the Cape in 1893 and again in 1903. He was knighted in 1907.]

POLO PLAYER'S DEATH.

New York, September 22.

Charles Rumsey, the sculptor and international polo player, was killed through a motor car crashing over a bridge on Long Island. Owing to his death the Meadowbrook team has withdrawn from the international polo tournament, thus giving the cup by default to Eastcott, the Anglo-American team, with which Meadowbrook should have contested the final on Saturday.

RUBBER SLUMP.

London, September 22.

At a meeting of the Rubber Growers' Association, Sir West Ridgeway, presiding, moved a resolution declaring that the Association was unable to proceed further with consideration of the international plantation rubber company scheme until the recommendation of the Colonial Office and the decision of the Government thereon were known.

COTTON SPINNING INDUSTRY.

SHORT TIME DECISION.

London, September 22.

The Federation of Master Cotton Spinners of Manchester announces that the vote in favour of short time mills spinning American cotton has now increased to over the necessary 80 per cent. Consequently curtailment of production is compulsory on all members of the federation. The general plan will be not to open the mills on Saturdays and Mondays for a month.

FRENCH INCOME TAX.

SWEEPING EXEMPTIONS.

Paris, September 22.

The minister of Finance proposes to exempt from income tax all salaries up to 8,000 francs a year, involving a loss to the Treasury of 90,000,000 francs. Abolition of the Government monopoly of matches is also suggested.

Deep-Seated Abscess in the Hip.

Remarkable Recovery after undergoing
three operations without success.

Our Patient is of Mrs. LAMBORN, of Maitland, Wiltshire, Wiltshire.
England, who writes:—
I am writing to tell you of the benefit I have received from your Clarke's Blood Mixture. I had a deep-seated abscess in my hip and was laid up about fourteen months and was unable to do anything. I was in hospital nine months and had three operations. Still I was no better.
I asked a friend to send me a bottle of your Clarke's Blood Mixture. I had been some three weeks still feeling very ill, so I thought I would try your Clarke's Blood Mixture. The first bottle I used felted the pus
out more than ever, and by the time I had taken half the second bottle I felt much better. I continued to take the mixture and in a few days I was able to get up. I have now been free from the abscess for several months. I am now able to do all my household work and am feeling much better than I have been for years. I am sure that your Clarke's Blood Mixture is a valuable remedy for all kinds of blood diseases. I have recommended
it to all my friends and they are all well. I am sure that your Clarke's Blood Mixture is a
valuable remedy for all kinds of
blood diseases. I have recommended
it to all my friends and they are all well.

ODDS AND ENDS.

MAINLY SCISSORS LOOT.

Marconi and His Work.

When listening in to Sena re Marconi at the meeting of his company in London to day I was struck with the burst of warm-hearted applause that greeted his appearance, writes a correspondent. His is one of the most romantic figures in science and commerce. Never before has an invention been exploited to such a point of benefit for humanity and profit for shareholders on the cash side. A good year in spite of the slump was followed by good profits and healthy dividends. Marconi himself looks extraordinarily young and healthy, and satisfied with his work. One thing he was not satisfied with, and that was the Government conflict with the development of his invention. He dwelt on the fact that this interference by the Government was leaving England behind in wireless development. His future picture of broadcasting suggested magic of a better brand even than the Arab's Nights. I think he even looked forward to the time when he would broadcast his annual speech to shareholders sitting comfortably in their armchairs at home, because then, he added, with a broad Italian smile,
the chairman will have no awkward questions to answer.

Japanese Games.

Dr. Lionel Giles writes that when dealing with things Japanese, it is safe in nine instances out of ten to assume that they have a Chinese origin. This is emphatically the case with "Shogi" and "Go," two games which a correspondent of the Times refers to as Japanese, but which, he may be interested to learn were played in China long before Japan had emerged from a state of savagery.
Shogi is simply the Japanese pronunciation of the Chinese words
"hsiang-ch'i," meaning "elephant chequers." This is in essentials the same game as chess, and derives its name from the fact that two of the pieces, corresponding to the bishops,
are called elephants.

Go is the Chinese wei chi or "surrounding chequers." The game starts on a clear board containing 18 x 18, or 324 squares, but the men, which are merely black and white pips or counters, are placed not on the squares themselves, but on the 361 points where the lines meet or intersect. The object of each player is to occupy as much of the board as possible by surrounding and capturing the pieces of the enemy. This game is mentioned in the Confucian Classics and dates back at least to the seventh century B.C.

Happy in the Rain.

Once upon a time the idea of a wet
day in lodgings by the sea was dreaded, by all, well as a Pall Mall Gazette writer. The children would wander about like little lost souls, having left the greater part of their toys at home
—a bucket and spade is not much use in the house. To-day however, the mother has lost her dread of a wet
day, for such serviceable wet weather clothes can be bought for children that they can go out as much as on a fine
day. For instance, warm knickers and a woolly frock underneath a mackintosh and sou'-wester, with feet
and legs encased in rubber "waders," make any small person independent of the rain, and they can, therefore,
enjoy a ramble over the cliffs or along the shore with the proverbial "cats and dogs" falling from the sky. Possibly, too, children are not quite so much the housewreckers they used to be. The wise mother hardens her children to vagaries of the weather, but sees, of course, that there is some nice hot water in which they can plunge their toes if the rain has penetrated, and that they have a good rub down and a change of woollies as soon as they return.

Holiday Errors.

London doctors are busy treating patients for the consequences of their holiday. "We always look forward to an increase of patients after the holidays," said a general practitioner to a Daily Mail reporter. "The reason is that most people do not know how to make the best use of their holidays. I have a patient who lost over a stone in weight during his three weeks' holiday. He bathed twice every day, and thus lost more body material than he could make up with food. "Another man has come back with a disordered heart from climbing mountains. For 11 months he led a sedentary office life, and then,
without preparation, embarked on exercise beyond the capacity of his heart. "Most people who make long cycle rides on their holidays after 11 months of relaxing city work know that on arrival at the end of their journey

they have no appetite for the much-needed meal, and are often too exhausted to sleep. "A man should return from a holiday invigorated, buoyant, and ravenous for work.
What happens in many cases is that the man is less fit than when he went away.

An Edinburgh Twilight.

It was the hour of the clear Edinburgh twilight, that strange time when the world seems to have forgotten the sun, though it keeps its colour;
it could still be seen that the moss
between the cobblestones was a wet bright green, and that a red autumn
had been busy with the wind-nipped trees. Yet these things were not gay, but cold and remote as brightness
might be on the bed of a deep stream, fathoms beneath the visitation of the sun. At this time all the town was ghostly, and she loved it so. She took her mind by the arm and marched it up and down among the sights of Edinburgh. . . . Now the Castle Replanned, that all day had proudly supported the harp, virile sounds and colours of the drilling regiments, would show to the slums its blank surface, bleached bone-white by the winds that raced above the city smoke.
Now the Cowgate and the Canongate
would be given over to the drama of the disorderly night; the slum-dwellers would forget their about the rotting doors of the dead men's mansions,
and brawl among the not less bawling ghosts of a past that never speaks of peace, but only of blood and argument. And Holyrood, under a black bank surrounded by a low bitten cliff,
would lie like the camp of an invading and terrified army.—From "The Judge," by Rebecca West.

A TIP TO TENNIS
PLAYERS.

To keep in good form for your favourite game the avoidance of constipation is important. And to dispel constipation there is nothing better than Pinkettes.
These dainty little laxatives act as gently as nature. They regulate the liver, ensure daily regularity, dispel bilious attacks and sick headaches,
clear the skin and sweeten the breath.
Chemists sell Pinkettes, or post free,
60 cents the vital, from Dr. Williams'
Medicine Co., 96 Brechters Road, Shanghai.

Corns Peel
Off Painlessly
There is Only One Genuine Corn
Peeler—"Geta-It."
There's only one happy way to get rid of corns or calluses, and that is to be able to peel them off easily painlessly. "Geta-It" is the only corn remedy in the world that does it.

"2 drops of "Geta-It" - Corn is doomed!"
That was effectively, thoroughly.
Why get down on the floor, tie your self up into a knot, and have to labor with troublesome plasters, greasy ointments that rub off, and then knives and cutters, when you can get rid of your corns in one complete piece, peacefully and surely, with music, simple, easy
"Geta-It" it takes 2 or 3 drops to apply "Geta-It"; you use 2 or 3 drops, and that is all. Get rid of that corn-pain at once, so that you can work and play without corn torture. Be sure to use
"Geta-It." It never fails.
"Geta-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, can be used on all corns and stores. N.Y. & E. Lawrence &

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)
THE NEAR EAST WAR CLOUD.

London, September 21st.
Advice from Athens state that the 1923
conscript have been called up.
Constantinople, September 21st.
In Komitist circles a pessimistic outlook prevails. They declare that unless they receive assurances and guarantees
from the Allies that the Thrace question will be settled in their favour, it will be impossible to restrain the army's victorious march forward and the responsibility for the consequences will fall on the Allies. They also state that unless pledges are forthcoming within the next forty-eight hours, a serious situation will arise.
The Soviet Government is reported to be buying great quantities of arms in Italy, including armoured cars, tanks, motor cars and machine-guns. It is believed these purchases are for the purposes of facilitating Bolshevik co-operation with the Komitists.

Constantinople, September 21st.
The French High Commissioner, Gen.
Pelle, has returned from Smyrna, where he interviewed Komitist leaders. General Pelle considered the results satisfactory.
London, September 21st.
In reply to cables from the Austrian and New Zealand Labour Parties, asking for the British Labour view on the Turkish situation, the British Labour Party replied: "British Labour is opposed to any war in the Near East and believes the only effective way of avoiding it is by reference of the dispute to the League of Nations, wherein Turkey,
Russia and Germany should be included.
We are strongly opposed to Great Britain acting individually and demand a settlement by discussion and agreement."

Smyrna, September 21st.
The twenty-five Moslem Members of the Indian Legislature who waited on the Viceroy, yesterday, with regard to the Near East, were of opinion that the essential conditions of peace with Turkey were, that the Turks should have soverignty in Thrace, including Adrianople, Constantinople and Asia Minor, with Smyrna included. Measures should be settled for the protection of minorities and the Straits should be restored to Turkey, on the latter furnishing guarantees.
The settlement in regard to the Straits should safeguard Constantinople from sudden attack by enemies. The Indian Moslems should be associated with the peace discussion.

Smyrna, September 21st.
Responsible opinion in India views the possibility of a three-British conflict with grave apprehension. In the event of such a conflict, all moderate co-operating Moslems will be almost forced to desert
the Government of India, thereby giving non-co-operation a strong new lease of life, which would be a disaster to India.

TO AVOID U.S.A. TARIFF DUTIES.

NEW YORK, September 21st.
Unprecedented activity is reported at Custom House bonded warehouses, owing to merchants hastening to clear goods before the operation of the new tariff at midnight. Duties are being paid to $2,000,000 have been paid into the Treasury on goods withdrawn within the past few days.
Some liners are proceeding at full speed to New York, with merchandise, and may reach their goal by a matter of minutes.

NEW YORK, September 21st.
Thousands of tons of foreign goods,
representing many millions of dollars,
aboard transatlantic steamers, will be subject to higher duties under the new tariff law, owing to failure of the steamers to arrive before midnight, when the tariff came into operation. The steamers concerned are the Rotterdam, Mauritania, Bellic, Loydard, Seydlitz and Bourdon-nais, also, perhaps a hundred ordinary cargo steamers trading on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS' DISCUSSIONS.

GENEVA, September 21st.
After heated debate supported by Dr.
Fisher, Lord Robert Cecil and other prominent members of the Disarmament Commission of the League of Nations adopted the resolution proposed by the French Senator M. de Jouvenel in favour of the vital questions of reparation and inter-Ally debts also exchanges and world unemployment being discussed by Governments besides the European powers hitherto concerned. The resolution counsels the Assembly to be ready to help
if asked.

"TRUTH, JUSTICE, PUBLIC SERVICE"
HONGKONG, SATURDAY, SEPT. 23, 1922.

ADVERSARIA.

I went into the Passport Office this week for a Pass. I didn't really want one, but somebody had persuaded me it would be a handy thing to have. I was told that the officials would be so glad to see me that they would throw a heap of passports in front of me and urge me to help myself. "Take half a dozen. We can recommend this one to the North Pole, or this one to Inferno." But it didn't work that way at all. The good-looking young man in charge looked me over with a cold eye, and said "You are not a resident, are you?" "No," I replied meekly. "I suppose not. I haven't actually lived here more than eight years. But" (I put in hopefully) "if you mention my name to His Excellency, or to the Colonial Secretary, or to anybody who is anybody, you may observe a little gleam of interest in their eyes if you watch closely. One of them may admit having heard of me." That's the worst of being connected with newspapers. It gives one a swollen head. I was foolishly under the impression that—well, that nobody would doubt my claims to be a resident. I might have known better, because there was the postman, too, tired to climb my stairs, who used to return my letters to the senders, endorsed "not known." And yet—and yet—if ever there was a man "well-known to the police," that man was I.

I confess that I am a bum politician. High politics are not in my line. That doesn't prevent me from curling my lip when they talk of British diplomacy. It was British diplomacy that drove Turkey and Bulgaria into the arms of our enemies, instead of keeping 'em at least neutral. It was British diplomacy that was largely instrumental in making the arrangements which have brought about this Turkish war, which is now dragging in our own war-weary Tommies as well as lads from the Dominions with such a big and bigoted Mohammedan community in our empire. It is not good that our attitude towards the Turks should be what it is. Our diplomats seem to have thought that the Greek axis would simplify matters for them, just as they thought the various "white" Russians would settle the "reds." Why we should do all the police work of the world I cannot see. I know we cannot afford it.

Talking of passports and stupid things) did I ever tell you about the last time I was coming to Hongkong? The Consul at the place where I was said: "This passport was issued in London, and I see you came here from Sydney. I cannot endorse it for Hongkong, but I will endorse it so that you can go back to Sydney, or to London, whichever you prefer." "But man alive," I said, "my job's in Hongkong. What's the use of my going to London or Sydney? If I cannot go to Hongkong, where they want me, it will be no use my going anywhere." "Don't ask me what his idea was, for I do not know. Eventually, after getting telegraphic advice from Hongkong, he relented. Sometimes I wish he hadn't. When I landed in Australia, no one asked me for my passport, so I kept it in my pocket, naturally. I spent over a year in Australia, travelling extensively, and then, when up in Queensland, I decided to go to Fiji. I timed my arrival in Sydney to be just two days ahead of the sailing of the boat I had booked by. When I went to the passport official in Sydney and handed him my passport for visa, he said: "What are you doing with this?" "I said I didn't understand. He said: "You have no right to be in possession of this passport." "Nonsense," said I, with heat. "It's mine. I bought it and paid for it." "It ought to have been given up when you landed in Australia," he said. "How was I to know that?" "I said, 'when no one asked for it.' "Well, you cannot go by that boat," he said. "It must go to Melbourne." "But that will delay me a full month," I said. "I cannot help that," he said. And he didn't. I spent a month in Sydney while my passport did the trip to Melbourne and back. There were worse places than Sydney to spend a month in; but was that fair or reasonable? It might have been a very serious matter if I had been a business man. Now you know (partly) why I love passports so much. I was a great traveller before the war, but never saw a passport nor needed one till that came. I thought that after the war was over we would go back to the old freedom. But I suppose they keep it up for the sake of the revenue it brings in. Oh well!

I feel as if I should like to buy three thousand copies of C. E. Montague's book "Disenchantment," and distribute them gratis. The E.A.S.M.A. fellows ought to have a copy in their library, because they should be able to understand and appreciate it. It is a saddening book for Englishmen to read; but at the same time should do good. It is beautifully written.

It is often, earnestly declared by people here that they "didn't come for their health." Just as well, if they meant that literally. But you know what they mean. They came to make and are on it. One wonders if they have ever really done any serious figuring about it. Statistics, percentages, and that sort of thing. I am no good at figures myself, but a chartered accountant has just informed me of the awful fact that whereas at Home an employee gets over 14 per cent. of pay, days, we here get only a little over three per cent.

It is well known to PROMOTION men that Hongkong practically worships its number one citizen, Sir Paul Chater; but I had no idea he had already been canonized until I saw him referred to in the Daily Press recently as St. Paul.

Hongkong has a long way to go yet in the direction of protecting what friend McWhirter prettily calls the "young yins." Even England has a long way to go, in spite of its S.P.C.K., and its presumably enlightened public opinion. Miss Clemence Dane shows that there must still be something wrong with the laws (or their administration) by contrasting penalties as in the following lists of cases taken at random from newspapers.

"For a tempted assault on a child of four. Bound over on account of previous good character."

"For assault on child of seven. Sentence: six months."

"For stealing leather from employers (same case). Sentence: six months."

"For assault on baby of four. Sentence: £2 fine."

"For assaulting and inflicting a child of seven. Sentence: twelve months."

"For assaulting and inflicting a child of seven. Bound over."

"For assaulting (on the same day) two little girls. Bound over."

"For assault on three small children—by dance unit for publication. Sentence: £5 fine."

"For assault on child of twelve (six previous convictions for the same offence). Sentence: three months."

"And so on—and so on—and so on."

"And now read this second list of offences against property also picked at random from newspapers, in the last two months:—

"For overcharge on drinks, of 23d. Sentence: 50 guineas."

"For burglary and receiving stolen goods. Sentence: seven years' penal servitude."

"For not displaying wine price list in restaurant. Sentence: £20 fine and 7 guineas costs."

"For uttering forged Treasury note. Sentence: three years."

"For betting in a grocer's shop. Sentence: £100 fine."

"For stealing motors and 'jewellery, also fraud. Sentence: five years' penal servitude."

"For robbery. Sentence: three months and twelve strokes of the cat."

"For obtaining goods on false pretences. Sentence: five years."

"For selling short-weight bread. Sentence: £150 fine."

Miss Dane adds this comment: "Which, on the evidence of its own police courts, of its own criminal code, does Mother England rate more highly—her sons and daughters or her goods and chattels? Isn't it a shame and a mark of shame upon us that we give a man the same punishment for ruining a child's body and mind as for stealing a piece of leather—that we fine him £50 for over-charging customers, 2 guineas for assault—that we give a woman three years for shop lifting and a baby-farmer (three of whose nurse children have died), six months for the slow starvation (in unprintable circumstances) of two children of under a year."

Stephen Leacock is to find out what it was all about. Such an one, after wading through the dreary verbiage of the Anabasis of Xenophon, was apt to ask, surprised: "So! Is that the sort of thing you have been raving over?" The scholar would smile tolerantly, and say, "Ah! But what did you expect of a translation? You should read it in the original." As if, reading it in the original, he did not himself have to translate it, mentally. No language, dead or alive, can do more than express ideas and (at best) do it musically. Any translation that is a translation must expose the ideas for what they are; and no language is naturally more musical than another. The elocutionist makes music with any. Now, if Leacock the humorist annoyed them, I wonder how they survived the shock of Dr. Charles A. Mercier's "Principles of Rational Education." He exposes the secret of the pro-classicists in the following "fable."

"Imagine England at this present time to be deviated by some immense catastrophe of the whole of her literature. Imagine her cut off from the literature of the rest of the world. Imagine all science to be forgotten, all arts but the most primitive to be nonexistent, and yet the people to retain their eagerness to know and to do. Imagine this state of affairs, and then imagine that by a strange chance the literature of ancient China or of Sanskrit were suddenly to become known amongst us. Judged even by our present standard these literatures are marvellous, and in some parts admirable; but what would they not be to such a nation as I have sketched! They would be seized upon with the same avidity, they would be studied with the same assiduity, their merits would be exalted with the same hyperbolic laudation as the Greek literature was at the time of the Renaissance. A knowledge of Chinese or of Sanskrit would be acquired by every man who made any pretence to be educated; and since, where education is expensive and is held in high estimation, it becomes the mark of the leisured and wealthy, a knowledge of Chinese or Sanskrit would soon become the appanage of the leisured and wealthy. Now suppose that the knowledge of science and the practice of art as they exist to day were gradually re-tethered to the nation, and suppose that in the course of a few generations such a magnificent vernacular literature as we now possess were to be produced, this science, this art, and this literature would be cultivated; they would be studied; but in the meantime the Chinese would have secured the monopoly in the schools of the wealthy and the leisured. A caste of teachers of Chinese would have become established and would guard their monopoly with sedulous vigilance. As the volume and excellence of modern science and of vernacular literature increased, the number of those who pursue them would increase, and the Chinese literature and science would become continually less and less important, more and more neglectable by comparison. What would be the obvious course for the caste of teachers of Chinese, to do in the circumstances? The teaching of Chinese is the only thing they can do; it is their monopoly, and it is a lucrative monopoly. They dominate the schools and universities, and it is to their interest that Chinese should continue to be taught as a matter of necessity in the schools and the universities. If therefore they have any rudiment of the instinct of self-preservation, they will secure that there shall be no entrance into a university of any student who has not already been taught Chinese at school. They will extol the wonders of the Chinese literature and science and philosophy, and lest anyone but themselves should read Chinese for himself and discover how inferior it is to modern literature and science and philosophy, they will teach it in such a way as to make it so disgusting to the scholar that, once he has left the school or university, he will never open a book on Chinese again; and lest this should be inefficient, they will teach it in such a way that after ten years of such teaching the scholar shall not be able to understand it at all; that his mind with respect to that and everything else shall be empty; that when he leaves school he shall know nothing. This, I say, is the natural course that self-preservation and the preservation of their monopoly would dictate to the teachers of Chinese under the circumstances. I have supposed."

They would be seized upon with the same avidity, they would be studied with the same assiduity, their merits would be exalted with the same hyperbolic laudation as the Greek literature was at the time of the Renaissance. A knowledge of Chinese or of Sanskrit would be acquired by every man who made any pretence to be educated; and since, where education is expensive and is held in high estimation, it becomes the mark of the leisured and wealthy, a knowledge of Chinese or Sanskrit would soon become the appanage of the leisured and wealthy. Now suppose that the knowledge of science and the practice of art as they exist to day were gradually re-tethered to the nation, and suppose that in the course of a few generations such a magnificent vernacular literature as we now possess were to be produced, this science, this art, and this literature would be cultivated; they would be studied; but in the meantime the Chinese would have secured the monopoly in the schools of the wealthy and the leisured. A caste of teachers of Chinese would have become established and would guard their monopoly with sedulous vigilance. As the volume and excellence of modern science and of vernacular literature increased, the number of those who pursue them would increase, and the Chinese literature and science would become continually less and less important, more and more neglectable by comparison. What would be the obvious course for the caste of teachers of Chinese, to do in the circumstances? The teaching of Chinese is the only thing they can do; it is their monopoly, and it is a lucrative monopoly. They dominate the schools and universities, and it is to their interest that Chinese should continue to be taught as a matter of necessity in the schools and the universities. If therefore they have any rudiment of the instinct of self-preservation, they will secure that there shall be no entrance into a university of any student who has not already been taught Chinese at school. They will extol the wonders of the Chinese literature and science and philosophy, and lest anyone but themselves should read Chinese for himself and discover how inferior it is to modern literature and science and philosophy, they will teach it in such a way as to make it so disgusting to the scholar that, once he has left the school or university, he will never open a book on Chinese again; and lest this should be inefficient, they will teach it in such a way that after ten years of such teaching the scholar shall not be able to understand it at all; that his mind with respect to that and everything else shall be empty; that when he leaves school he shall know nothing. This, I say, is the natural course that self-preservation and the preservation of their monopoly would dictate to the teachers of Chinese under the circumstances. I have supposed."

to find out what it was all about. Such an one, after wading through the dreary verbiage of the Anabasis of Xenophon, was apt to ask, surprised: "So! Is that the sort of thing you have been raving over?" The scholar would smile tolerantly, and say, "Ah! But what did you expect of a translation? You should read it in the original." As if, reading it in the original, he did not himself have to translate it, mentally. No language, dead or alive, can do more than express ideas and (at best) do it musically. Any translation that is a translation must expose the ideas for what they are; and no language is naturally more musical than another. The elocutionist makes music with any. Now, if Leacock the humorist annoyed them, I wonder how they survived the shock of Dr. Charles A. Mercier's "Principles of Rational Education." He exposes the secret of the pro-classicists in the following "fable."

"Imagine England at this present time to be deviated by some immense catastrophe of the whole of her literature. Imagine her cut off from the literature of the rest of the world. Imagine all science to be forgotten, all arts but the most primitive to be nonexistent, and yet the people to retain their eagerness to know and to do. Imagine this state of affairs, and then imagine that by a strange chance the literature of ancient China or of Sanskrit were suddenly to become known amongst us. They would be seized upon with the same avidity, they would be studied with the same assiduity, their merits would be exalted with the same hyperbolic laudation as the Greek literature was at the time of the Renaissance. # COMMERCIAL CONFERENCE AT HONOLULU. A PAN-PACIFIC MOVEMENT.

A remarkable gathering is scheduled to be held in the centre of the Pacific Ocean this Fall.

From October 25th to November 8th in Honolulu the "key men" in matters of commerce and finance from the lands bordering the greatest of waters are to meet each other daily to formulate plans for future inter-racial cooperation in bringing about the development of those interests common to all the peoples of the Pacific area.

These men representing government departments or commercial bodies are being carefully selected from each country. They will be guests of the Pan Pacific Union. These delegates will represent the two thirds of the world's population which is tributary to the shores of the Pacific Ocean. They realize that the Pacific is to be the future theatre of the world's commerce. They know that the traditions of peace that have always prevailed in the Pacific can best be maintained by the leaders of men in all lines of thought and action in Pacific lands meeting together and establishing among themselves a foundation of mutual confidence on which will be built cooperative effort.

Following the precedent established at the other conferences of Pan-Pacific scientists, educators and businessmen, called by the Pan Pacific Union, it is expected that President Harding will send the note of the Commercial Conference in his message, to be read by the Governor of Hawaii at the opening of its sessions. Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has already penned his message and is sending unofficial delegates as are the departments of Agriculture, Navy and Interior in the United States, as well as the Department of Trade and Commerce in Canada and the proper governmental departments in the other countries of the Pacific. Besides delegates from governmental departments the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has appointed five delegates. It is understood that the president and secretary of the National Foreign Trade Commerce will attend with a proper delegation from that body: the presidents of the Pacific Coast chambers of commerce propose attending with delegations composed of leading business men, while from Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan and other Pacific land, financial organizations or boards of trade will send their leaders.

The Presidents and Premiers of Pacific lands are heads of the Pan-Pacific Union, which although an unofficial body, is supported in part by appropriations from Pacific governments. The State Department has transmitted the invitation of the Union to the Pacific governments to send their delegates and it is expected at this conference in Honolulu that a firm foundation will be laid for future friendly commercial understanding in the Pacific area.

An interesting feature of the conference will be the presence and participation on the part of the deans of a number of Commercial Colleges connected with Pacific Universities—this at the request of Japan. It is said that throughout Pacific lands, including the United States, a full million men have taken or are taking foreign trade study courses. These men will guide the future commerce of the Pacific area, and their cooperation is desired by the Commercial Conference. Viscount Shibazawa is organizing the Japanese delegation, and Hsien Yen, one of the delegates to the Washington Conference, with H. Y. Moh of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, the Chinese delegation. Manila and even far off Java on the edge of the Pacific expect to send their delegations, and Siberia has already appointed hers.

Alexander Hume Ford, director of the Pan-Pacific Union, has made a tour of the United States and Canada in the interests of the conference and is now meeting in their home cities those who will attend from the Orient. Percy Hunter, one of the Australian founders of the Union, has made a trip from London to Hawaii and back to Australia to interest that country in sending a representative delegation.

The delegates from the Pacific lands will be entertained in Hawaii for two weeks. Here they will be together all of the time and as all of the delegates will speak English, it is expected that many lasting international friendships will be brought about.

The American, Canadian and Latin delegates will sail from San Francisco on October 18th.

The chief topics to be discussed at the conference are Communication and Transportation, Development and Conservation of Natural Resources, Finance and Investments, International Relations in the Pan-Pacific area.

Your cabinet members and many men of highest standing in Pacific lands are preparing papers on these topics and it is expected that more

TYPHOON BLOW. EFFECT ON RECLAMATION WORK. MATERIAL NOT LOST.

"The material has not been lost; it just means that the work will be hung up for about ten days" was the assurance given by Mr. John Duncan, M.I.C.E., the executive engineer in charge of the Praya East Reclamation scheme, when questioned by a China Mail reporter as to the effect of the recent typhoon blow upon the work at present being carried out along the forebore at Wanchai.

The reporter drew his attention to the suggestion which appeared in Thursday's issue of the Telegraph that "a retaining wall should have been built to avoid the disastrous results that have ensued through earth and sand, which were laboriously brought down from Morrison Hill and represent the results of weeks' activities, being washed away within a day."

"The suggestion is an idiotic one," was Mr. Duncan's reply. "As a matter of fact," Mr. Duncan said, "the material has not been washed away at all. The rubble mound foundations of the new sea wall have already been deposited along a length of about 300 feet opposite the peninsula that has been growing out from Bowring Canal. Up to the end of last month about 13,700 cubic yards of rubble stone had been deposited along the line of the new sea wall, about 6,500 cubic yards of which were above the level of the harbour bottom prior to the dredging of the trenches. Discolouration of the water outside the line of the wall was observed for a distance of only about 20 feet."

Discussing Wednesday's high tide Mr. Duncan pointed out that the height of the tide predicted for Wednesday morning was 7 ft. 1 in. above low water level of ordinary spring tides, whereas the water actually rose to approximately 10 ft. C. 1 in.

The rails are now buried in the dump, which has subsided about four feet; it is estimated that it will take the contractors, Messrs. Sang Lee & Co., about two weeks to get things back into working order again.

A good deal has been achieved since the contractors received instructions to begin work on November 1st last year, in addition to purchasing a large amount of plant, erecting quarters for workmen, laying rail-roads some 300,000 cubic yards of filling material have been deposited, temporary drains constructed, staging and frames erected to define the line of the sea wall and trenches dredged. The total value of the work accomplished up to the end of last month was $148,000.

ARMED ROBBER CAUGHT. OTHER TWO ESCAPE.

Three men, two armed with revolvers, and the other with a dagger, entered the first floor of No. 7, Upper Lascar Row at 6.45 this morning and made a haul of jewellery and money worth $169. A woman was awakened by a voice saying "Get up." When she sat up, she saw the three men in her cubicle. While one man covered her with his revolver and threatened to shoot if she attempted to raise an alarm the other two took from her a gold wrist watch, a bracelet, two rings and a pair of earrings. They then searched the cubicle and took five gold buttons and $20 in cash. The woman gave the alarm as soon as the robbers left and a Chinese constable caught one man who had a dagger in his possession. When searched at the station, the bracelet and the ear rings were recovered from his person. The other two robbers got away.

BOTH SORRY. MAGISTRATE AND COMPLAINANT.

The Chinese who was yesterday remanded by Mr. E. W. Hamilton on a charge of stealing two lengths of chain, the property of the Kowloon-Canton Railway, was sentenced to 14 days' hard labour, this morning.

When the case was called the Magistrate said to Mr. G. A. Walker, Traffic Superintendent: "I am sorry to have brought you across, but the case cannot proceed without the presence of the complainant."

Mr. Walker: "I am sorry I was not present yesterday, but I did not mean any disrespect to the Court."

More than a hundred of the "key men" of the Pacific will attend the Conference to further trade and commerce between Pacific lands.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY. ANNUAL MEETING HELD.

HON. MR. A.G. STEPHEN NEW PRESIDENT.

The forty-first annual meeting of the Hongkong St. Andrew's Society was held in the City Hall last evening, the President (the Hon. Mr. A. O. Lang) occupying the chair. Supporting him were Messrs. R.M. Dyer, J. Reid, Dr. G. D. R. Black, Mr. J.W.C. Bonnar, Mr. E. M. Young, Mr. T. W. Hill (hon. secretary) and Mr. J. W. R. McPhail (hon. treasurer). There was a big attendance of members.

The Chairman said:—Gentlemen,—The Report and Accounts having been in your hands for some days I will, with your permission, follow the usual procedure and take them as read, and I trust you will consider them satisfactory. It is gratifying to report an increase in subscriptions to the extent of $100, but a still further increase is possible, as I understand there are quite a number of Scotsmen in the colony, who are not members of the Society. I hope an effort will be made to get everyone who is eligible into the fold, and in that connection members are earnestly requested to give their assistance by bringing forward new names. In accordance with the resolution passed at our last annual meeting a draft for £250 was forwarded to Field Marshal Earl Haig's Fund for Unemployed Ex-Servicemen, and an appreciative acknowledgment of the Society's gift has since been received from London. During the year there were an unusually large number of applications for assistance from Scotsmen in distress, and you may rest assured that each case was carefully considered before relief was given. Investments remain as before, and the Ball Account does not seem to me to require any comment. Our best thanks are again due to Mr. R. Bruce of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation for having audited the accounts.

Miss Marjory Jane Stuart of the Kowloon British School was successful in obtaining the "J. R. M. Smith" Scholarship and we offer her our hearty congratulations on her achievement. (Applause.)

St. Andrew's Day was celebrated by the usual Ball, and your Committee take this opportunity of thanking the convenors and members of the various sub-committee who contributed so ably to a very successful function. There are one or two old friends to whom my personal thanks are due for assistance in connection with the Ball, but as it is invidious to mention names I would ask them to accept this reference as an appreciation of their special services.

The "Burns Night" Dinner, held on 25th January, at the Hongkong Hotel will long be remembered for the eloquent speech in which the Hon. Mr. A. G. Stephen proposed "The Immortal Memory." Mr. Stephen delighted us all by quotations, from a well stored memory, of characteristic passages from the poems of our national bard.

Death has claimed a large number of members during the past year. Mr. Murray Stewart, President of the Society in 1910, passed away in California some few months ago. He was one of the finest types of Scotsmen, it was possible to meet, and his services to the Society are well-known to most of those present here this evening. Sir Patrick Manson, K.C. M. G., by his study of tropical diseases while resident in Hongkong, raised himself to eminence in his profession, and by his death at home the Empire loses one of its most celebrated medical specialists. Mr. J. D. Logan, a keen and active worker for the Society for many years and probably our oldest member, passed away only a few days ago and he will be missed in connection with all matters relating to Scottish interests in this Colony. Messrs. A. Mackenzie, Frank Maitland, W. G. Lay, D. M. Mackay, J. McCordale and John Wilkie, old and valued members have also been taken away, and it is fitting that this opportunity be taken of expressing our sympathy with the relatives in each particular case.

I now beg to propose the adoption of the Report and Accounts as presented, and after these have been seconded, I shall answer to the best of my ability any questions members may wish to put.

Mr. D. Templeton seconded and the resolution was carried unanimously.

NEW PRESIDENT.

The Chairman said he had very much pleasure in proposing the Hon. Mr. A. G. Stephen as President for the ensuing year. Mr. Stephen needed no recommendation; his ability and genial disposition were well known and all were much impressed with the ease and eloquence with which he spoke. No more popular Scotsman could be nominated for this important position. (Applause.)

Mr. R. M. Dyer: It gives me a great deal of pleasure to second that resolution.

The Chairman:—Though Mr. Stephen is absent from the Colony, he will be back early in November and has informed me that, if elected, he will be proud to accept office. (Applause.)

The resolution was carried with acclamation and the Chairman intimated that he would cable the decision of the meeting to Mr. Stephen.

LECTION OF OFFICERS.
Mr. G. M. Young proposed Mr. R. Sutherland as Vice-President and remarked that there was no more enthusiastic Scotsman in the Colony. Mr. J. Reid seconded and the resolution was carried.

The Chairman announced, with regret, that Mr. T. W. Hill, secretary for the last three years, found it impossible to accept office for a further term. He took this opportunity of thanking Mr. Hill for his energetic work. (Applause.) The Society was very fortunate that Mr. D. K. Blair had been persuaded to stand for election as hon. secretary and he was sure, if elected, Mr. Blair would carry out the duties in his usual efficient manner. (Applause.) He proposed Mr. Blair's election.

Mr. J. McCubbin seconded and the resolution was carried.

Mr. J. W. R. McPhail was re-elected hon. treasurer, on the proposition of Mr. A. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. A. K. Henderson.

The Committee was elected by ballot as follows:—Dr. C. Forsyth, Dr. G. D. R. Black, Messrs. J. Reid, W. Nicholson and A. K. Henderson.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.
Discussing the celebration of St. Andrew's Day this year the Chairman proposed that the Society hold a ball as last year. With the same valuable assistance as was forthcoming last year there was no reason why the ball should not be even more successful.

Mr. Banner seconded, humorously remarking that if the Society did not have a ball there would be an eruption in the Colony. (Laughter.) The resolution was unanimously carried.

THE SCOTCH COMPANY.
Mr. T. W. Hill, as the Officer Commanding the Scottish Company of the Volunteer Corps, expressed appreciation of the generosity of the handful of leading Scotsmen in the place who had defrayed out of their own pockets the expenses for the additional equipment ordered for the Company. The Chairman mentioned last year that the Company should be quite 200 strong by that time, and so far as he (Mr. Hill) was aware there was no reason why it should not be so. He hoped members would do their best individually to try and persuade their colleagues in the offices to join. The Band had asked him to say that they were recruiting gradually and could only show their appreciation by turning out whenever the St. Andrew's Society required their services.

Mr. McCubbin suggested that at the next fall the President and Vice-President should appear in kilts. (Laughter.)

The Chairman: If Mr. McCubbin is really serious about this, I will include it in my cable to Mr. Stephen. Personally I tried to get into a kilt last year but I could not make it. (Laughter.)

After a number of new members had been elected the meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

"MARRIED LIFE". AT THE CORONET.

"Married Life" is the intriguing title of the new picture which comes to the Coronet to-morrow. It is not, as some might be disposed to expect, a tragedy, nor even a drama; it is a rattling good comedy produced by the Mack Sennett studios. The principal part in it is taken by Ben Turpin, the queer little chap with the cross-crossed eyes that simply won't behave. It is just a good natured caricature of the Matrimonial state and contains not a single dull moment.

TANSAN

received the highest award

A GOLD MEDAL

from a committee of critical judges at the

Anglo Japanese Exhibition

which testifies to its excellency and purity.

Beware of bogus imitations. No Tansan is genuine unless the label bears the name of

J. OLIFFORD WILKINSON.

Unrivalled as a drink. Mixes well with Wines, Spirits or Milk.

Tansan raises the spirits and excites sanguine anticipation even as a flagon of wine exhilarated the monks of old.

For the good old spirit of orders grey

Would have waived the flagon of wine away

And consoled himself as any man can

With bubbling, sparkling, cool Tansan.

Tansan can be obtained at all first class Hotels, Bars and Clubs in the Far East.

CHURCH NOTES.

THE FIFTEENTH SUNDAY
AFTER TRINITY.

Love must find expression, and the highest and most satisfying expression is sacrifice, so we have the great paradox of Christianity—that only those who lose their lives shall find them. As the mark of the Jew is circumcision, the mark of the Christian will be the Cross. Suffering comes to every one, but only voluntary acceptance can make it beautiful and something to be desired. It was the love of Jesus, too great for His Heart to contain, that overflowed and found its ultimate expression in the suffering of the Crucifixion. So when we enter the Church at Baptism, the sign of the Cross, is marked upon us, then later in life comes the compulsory bearing of the Cross which no one escapes, but we shall pray that as the heart of Simon of Cyrene was changed so for as the carrying of the cross may become a privilege and a joy. Then the desire in our hearts to be made perfect through suffering, and the fear lest we are leading too indulgent a life so that the print of the Nails—the symbol of Christ's ownership, cannot be felt, and at last hoping that we too may truthfully cry out with St. Paul "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Constantly in His earthly ministry Jesus tells His followers to love spiritual joys first and then they will not be distracted by earthly cares. At once our thoughts turn to Martha who in her anxiety to serve Our Lord was so restless and disturbed by unnecessary details that she had no time, and was not quiet enough to listen to Jesus.

"Be still and know that I am God." How can we be still, if we are constantly worrying about our food and clothes, our health, provision for our earthly comfort—of course since God has placed us in this world He knows we need these things. Christ, in tomorrow's Gospel does not forbid prudent foresight, but warns us against letting earthly care distract our souls from higher things. Near Agra, on the Gate of Victory these words are inscribed "Jesus, on Whom be peace said 'Use this world as a bridge; pass over it but build no house thereon.'" So Christians will look towards the future, to eternity as they journey through this life making provision without anxiety even as the bird build their nests, pressing onwards to the Light as the lilies press their stalks through the ground, growing tranquilly until at last they lift up their faces and behold the sun.

Friday the 29th of September, is the Feast of St. Michael and all Angels. In the New Testament only two are mentioned by name, St. Michael who fought with the dragon and Gabriel who came to Mary before the birth of Jesus and to Elizabeth to foretell the birth of John the Baptist. In the Apocrypha we read of Raphael who helps Tobias, neither he nor his father Tobit recognize him as a spiritual being until he reveals himself (when they offer him payment for his services) saying "I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels, which present the prayers of the saints and which go in and out before the glory of the Holy One."

Jewish tradition gives names of three other Angels "Chamuel," "Jophiel," and "Zudkiel"—the first is supposed to be the one who wrestles with Jacob, the second to be the guardian of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, and the third, the Angel who stayed Abraham's hand just as he was about to slay Isaac.

The Church of England neither forbids nor encourages prayer to Angels, but she does not wish us to ever forget their presence. "Therefore with Angels and Archangels and with all the company of Heaven, we laud and insignify Thy glorious Name."

A Mr. Broughton, writing on the subject of derivation of usage of the word Mass, sums up his arguments for its retention in the English Church in some very neat and convincing words. He says: "There are many names for the Sacrament of the Altar, 'the Holy Eucharist', 'the Holy Communion', 'the Holy Mysteries', 'the Divine Liturgy', 'the Mass', etc. Each title brings out some one aspect of the Mystery. For Example, the Holy Eucharist expresses the thought of our Thank Offering; the Holy Communion our spiritual food and sustenance; the Holy Mysteries the inward spiritual part; the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ; and the Divine Liturgy, the chief and greatest of all our worship. Mass, without giving prominence to any one feature of the Mystery, sums them all up in a monosyllable. It is short, and to a practical person this is a great advantage; it is English Church itself, and for 900 years previous to what is called the Reformation, was the name by which in English the Holy Eucharist was commonly called. It is the name given in the first English Prayer Book set forth in 1549, 'the Holy Communion' commonly called the Mass. It was dropped from the successive revisions of the Prayer Book through the pressure of heretics, who, if they had succeeded, would have destroyed not only the whole of our Prayer Book, but the very foundations of the Church itself. The name still lingers on in the words Christmas, Candlemas, Michaelmas.

The only objection ever offered against its use is that it is Romish, and so 'offensive' to Protestants. I have shown that the first is not true. As to the second objection, if we are to be so considerate for other people's feelings, we should start a movement to erase the word priest from the Prayer Book on the ground of its offensiveness to Protestants. We should present the word Catholic also to our Roman brethren and many other things. We should rewrite the title of Christmas and call it Christ's Communion; Candlemas we might call Candle-Sacrament. The real objection to the word Mass is based on a misunderstanding of the word Mass stands for Real Presence of the Body and Blood of Christ in the Sacrament of the Altar, and there is no mistaking its meaning, or putting anything new or offensive into it.

The St. Andrew's Waterside Mission had a most enthusiastic annual meeting this year and speeches and reports showed that the Mission is making the strides it deserves in its work amongst our seamen. Although we hear very little of this mission here in Hongkong, yet we need to remember it as it is definitely church work and has done and is doing definite work not only amongst the sailors whom we look upon as merchant sailors but amongst fishermen.

At the meeting the Bishop of Exeter had some very encouraging remarks to make which showed how greatly he valued the work which the Mission is doing in the south of his diocese. He said, "Seamen are, as a whole, a very religious set of men," and went on to say that in his Devonshire diocese there were towns such as Brixham which were inhabited almost entirely by sailors and fishermen, and he could speak from personal knowledge of the deep religious feeling which prevailed in such towns. It was one of the curious anomalies of life that the people who had the best opportunities for engaging in religious worship were often the least regular in their observances while others, like sailors, who were frequently deprived of all opportunities for long periods, were the most eager in their acceptance of them when available. The wonder was in the view of temptations which beset the sailors ashore, especially in the foreign countries, that any sailors remain straight, but actually sailors were a very straight class of men. He thought that in the Church it was well that there should be special bodies of people whose one object was to help the souls of the British sailors. It needed some special gifts and experience to work among sailors, and he rejoiced that the St. Andrew's Waterside Church Mission was so well equipped for the task.

PEARLYTAIL'S SONG.

(Two weeks ago I told you about a little girl called Margaret who lost her comb when she was bathing at Junk Bay and how it was found by a mermaid called Pearlytail. Now you shall hear what happened a little later on.)

Pearlytail had a very sweet voice and she would often sit for hours on a rock by the sea shore combing her long golden hair with the white comb which Margaret had lost.

The fishes came swimming along to listen to her and gazed at her open mouthed, the crabs sidled out from their pools and circled round the rock on which she sat and even the birds ceased their own singing and hovered near. She seemed to have a magical power over all live things and because she loved them and liked them to come and listen to her this is what she often sang to them—

"Tidy fish with shining eyes
Swimming gracefully along,
While I comb my golden hair
Come and listen to my song.
For I love to see you there,
While I comb my golden hair."

Little crabs creep nearer do,
I will make a song for you,
For I love to see you there
While I comb my golden hair.

Birds, dear birds, since you were small
You have sung the whole day long
I have lately learnt to sing.
Yet you listen to my song,
Oh I love to see you there
While I comb my golden hair."

And then she sang to them of the wonderful deep blue sea with its many treasures of pearls and beautiful shells and sea-weed of all colours and of the palaces under the sea where dwelt the mermaids and their friends. To all this the fishes and birds loved to listen. Then she went on to tell of the green covered islands which she saw when she rose out of the water, the bright coloured flowers and trickling streams of tall frathery trees and shady pools where her feathered friends might bathe and cool themselves in the hot weather. This was the part which the birds liked best and always they begged Pearlytail to add new verses to her song and were never tired of listening to her.

One day Pearlytail was sitting on her favourite rock by the water's edge. She was so taken up by her singing that she never noticed that a launch had come into the bay and that a dinghy with two or three people in it was being rowed to the shore.

Now Margaret was in this boat and on the way she was telling a friend how she had lost her comb when she bathed there before.

"I don't suppose that I shall ever find it again," she said.
"No I should hardly think so," agreed her friend and then the keel grated on the sand and they sprang out.

"Come and look for the shells along the shore," urged Margaret. "Sometimes you can find lovely ones here."
"I must go for a swim first," answered her friend. "The water is so cool and inviting."

"Very well, I will come in too in a few minutes," cried Margaret as she scrambled along the bank and towards the rocks and then—Well of course you know what she heard as she drew near to the rocks—the refrain of Pearlytail's song—

"For I love to see you there
While I comb my golden hair."

Pearlytail herself, with her back to Margaret, was singing as sweetly as a nightingale and in her hand she held the lost comb.

"My comb," gasped Margaret as her eyes fell on it.

The fishes sank into the sea as they heard this. The crabs scuttled back into their pools. Pearlytail turned round startled and was about to drop into the sea when she suddenly changed her mind and clasping her hands cried, "Oh mortal, must I give it back to you? Is it very very precious?"

"Precious," laughed Margaret. "Why I do not care a bit about it and Mother bought me a new one the day after I lost it."

"Then I may keep it!" asked Pearlytail, trembling with anxiety.

"Of course you may," Margaret answered. "But tell me, why do you call it precious?"

"Because no one in the whole kingdom of the sea has ever seen one like it," replied Pearlytail. "My Mother has lately given me a golden comb for my birthday but then all my sisters have golden combs too."
"How queer it is!" exclaimed Margaret. "You had never seen a white comb and I have never seen a golden one. In fact I have only read of them in fairy tales and I never believed that there were such things really."

"Would you like mine?" asked Pearlytail, smiling at the thought of being able to give something in return. "Come with me and I will fetch it."

LOVE-LETTER CLUE.

FIND IN RANSACKED
HOUSE.

Traced by a love-letter Joseph Fredk. Morris, 30, a carpenter of Rowton House, Camden Town, N.W., was ransacked at Marylebone on a charge of breaking into a house in Broadhurst gardens, West Hampstead, and stealing silver clothing, and about 500 cigars, worth £500, belonging to Mr. Hyam Stark, a costume manufacturer.

Detective Parlett said that in the house, among things strewn about the floors, he found an old love-letter from a girl at Highbury addressed to "My dear Buff." He kept watch in Blackstock road, Highbury, and when Morris appeared stopped him with the remark, "I believe you are Buff."

"Yes, that's me," he replied, and was arrested.
At the police station Morris was shown the love-letter and asked if he could account for it being found in the house. He replied that it was in the pocket of a suit which he exchanged with another man; but later he said, "Yes, that's right; I left it there. I must blame an innocent man."

Mr. d'Eyncourt, the magistrate, directed a remand, and marked the charge-sheet. "Detective Parlett showed considerable observation and resource in this matter."

"But how can I go with you. I cannot swim under the water," said Margaret.

"Oh yes you can if you take my hand," Pearlytail assured her. Margaret felt that she must try so she took Pearlytail's cold little hand and together they sprang into the water. Down, down, down they went to the very bottom of the sea and on and on until they came to the great rock palace where the mermaid lived. It was surrounded by gardens of beautiful sea-weed and tall sea-weed like trees grew around it. They passed up a shell-lined path, through the open door into a great hall and through that into a smaller room where the mermaid and her sisters slept on sea-weed beds. Their golden combs lay in a large mother-of-pearl shell which was held up to the wall by two scarlet anemones.

Pearlytail took the one which belonged to her and which had her name in pearls along the back and then, still holding Margaret's hand, she swam with her back to the rock. Margaret was nearly breathless but she managed to gasp, "Where are all your sisters?" for she had been astonished at not seeing anyone in the great hall of the palace.

"They have all gone to a wedding," answered Pearlytail. "My cousin Pearlydear is being married to-day. I was singing and had forgotten all about it till now and I must go quickly after them. Farewell mortal. Perhaps one day we shall meet again." And she gave the golden comb to Margaret, helped her on to the rock and disappeared hastily in the cool green water.

Just then Margaret's friend came running along.
"Where have you been?" she cried. "I have been looking for you everywhere."

"Oh Eunice," Margaret answered with sparkling eyes "I have had a wonderful adventure." And she showed her the golden comb and told her about the mermaid and how she had gone right to the bottom of the sea.

"Until I go back to England I will come here every year and drop a white comb into the sea," she added. "And that will make some other little mermaid happy."

This she remembered to do and, as for the golden comb, she guarded it carefully as her greatest treasure.

OBITUARY.

MR. A. A. DOS REMEDIOS.

The local Portuguese community was much stirred by news of the death on Thursday night of Mr. Adelino A. dos Remedios, one of the few remaining old-timers of Hongkong, and a highly respected member of the community.

The deceased who was over 70 years of age at the time of his death, had been 42 years in the employ of Messrs Jardine, Matheson and Company, and was a most valued hand in the book office of the Company. A strong and lively man for his age, the late Mr. Remedios had kept steadily at work until two days before his death. He was prevailed upon to go home to get over a chill which he was suffering from. His condition was not alarming then, but the chill rapidly developed into influenza, followed by pneumonia, and death claimed him at 9 p.m., on Thursday. The deceased had been advised on more than one occasion previously, when he was slightly indisposed, to take a rest and recuperate, but he would not hear of it, and it took a lot of persuasion on Tuesday before he consented to go home.

Mr. Remedios' death has cast a gloom upon his fellow-employees at Jardine's, many of whom had not yet been born when he started work there.

The deceased saw the major portion of his service with the Company in the Shipping Office, but was transferred three years ago to the Book Office of the Indo-China line. Of a quiet disposition, the deceased however, possessed a charming manner which won for him the regard of all who came in contact with him.

He leaves a widow, a son (Mr. J. S. dos Remedios of the Post Office), a daughter (Mrs. J. P. Tavares) and several grandchildren, with whom the deepest sympathy is felt in their bereavement.

The funeral took place from his residence No. 6, Coine Road, yesterday evening and was well attended.

There was a large collection of floral tributes, which, besides those sent by the relatives, included the following—From Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., Ltd., Messrs D. G. M. Bernard, E. F. Aucott, P. Tod, Ho Fook, Ho Leung, Lo Chueng-shui, Ho Kam-tong, M. H. Lo, The Indo China Steam Navigation Staff and the Portuguese staff of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., Ltd.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MOVING ELECTRIC METERS.

[To the Editor of the "China Mail,"]

Sir—The attention of our clients
the Hongkong Electric Company Limited has been drawn to a case in the Summary Court, recently reported in the daily papers, in which it was made to appear that the work of altering or removing the Company's electric meters "could be done by outside firms but the Electric Company had to be paid a fee."

The Company wish to correct this erroneous statement, as the Company is very particular in allowing no one but its own servants to do anything to its meters, and any contractor who is given work to do which involves moving or interfering with a meter has to notify the Company which sends its own employees to do what is necessary to the meter.

For such labour and material as is required the Company makes a
"flat" charge of $5.00 (per meter),
which, when a contractor is employed on other electric work on the premises, is of course usually collected from him and by him included in his bill.

The Company asks the courtesy of your columns to make the above as widely known as possible.

We are,
Yours faithfully,
JOHNSON, STOKES & MASTERS.

Hongkong, September, 23rd.

STUDENT'S SERVICES ASSO-

CIATION.

[To the Editor of the "China Mail,"]

Sir—I shall be grateful if you will allow me space in your columns to clear up difficulties which appear to have arisen in certain sections of the Colony with reference to the Students' Services Association. The object of this Association is to provide "A University Sermon" on each Sunday during term time on lines similar, as far as possible, having reference to local conditions, to the University Sermon preached at Oxford and Cambridge. Our efforts, in the first place, must necessarily be experimental, but thanks to the courtesy of the authorities of the Rhenish Mission Church Building in Bonham Road, as well as to the generosity of Sir Paul Chater
we are able to continue the experiment for one more year. Our great hope is that these sermons may form a link between the Colony and the University, and may perhaps be a means of bringing the Colony to realise more fully that this is a University town, and that there are opportunities in a University town
which are not to be found elsewhere.
We hope that the clergy and ministers of all denominations as well as the leading laymen in the Colony will preach during the year on subjects of real importance in relation to modern thought, and we hope that the Colony
as a whole will avail itself of the opportunity of hearing these sermons.
The programme is being printed for the year, and I shall be pleased to send a copy to anyone who is interested. This also will appear each week
under the advertisement of "Church Services" in your paper. From this it will be seen that to-morrow the presenter will be the Rev. W. T. Featherstone, M.A., Headmaster of the Diocesan Boys' School, who is taking for his subject "The Position of the modern Churchman."

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A. E. PENNY.

Hon. Secretary,
Students' Services Association,
Hongkong, September, 22.
